

Local and General Briefs.

The Journal job department this week completed a very attractive two color program for Miss Enid Cole's Thanksgiving-Armistice concert to be held at Bellevue on Monday evening, November 8th.

The up-to-date merchant realizes that advertising copy without prices in plain figures is about as interesting to the average reader as a year old newspaper.

Coleman enjoyed a safe and sane Halloween last week for the first time in many years. Just whether the double celebration, Friday and Saturday evenings, was responsible for this it is hard to say, still the fact remains that hundreds of young folks had a good time and very little, if any, damage to property has been reported.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Brocklehurst, of Cardanville, are spending a few days with relatives in Calgary.

Mr. J. Sommerville, who has been assisting in Mr. H. C. McBurney's drug store during the past six weeks, left Saturday last to take a position in Lethbridge.

W. M. Davidson, for many years owner and publisher of the Calgary Albertan, sold his paper to Messrs. G. M. Bell and Charles E. Campbell on Monday of this week.

Don't forget the masquerade ball in the Opera House on Friday evening, given under the auspices of the local Knights of Pythias. The proceeds from this affair go to help the Wood's Orphan Home at Olds.

Mrs. Robert Holmes, 8th street, was one of the out-of-town guests at the Hall-Goodwin wedding at Bellevue on Monday.

Monday was All Saint's Day. Services were held in the Holy Ghost Church morning and evening.

Miss Connie Hope left last Friday for Lethbridge where she will enter the Galt hospital as a nurse in training. Mrs. Hope accompanied her daughter to Lethbridge returning to Coleman Wednesday morning.

It has been suggested that the Statue of Liberty should be removed from New York harbor. But why? No one appreciates a good joke more than an American.

An Elk Lodge is to be instituted at Coronation on Nov. 15th.

If you can't pay for a thing, don't buy it. If you can't get paid for it, don't sell it. So you will have calm days, drowsy nights, and all the good business you have now, and none of the bad.

Leonard D. Nesbitt, editor and publisher of the Mail, Beacon, one of the most widely known newspapers of the province, a past president of the Alberta Newspaper Association, has recently been appointed head of the publicity branch of the Alberta Wheat Pool. Mr. Nesbitt will take up his new duties in the near future.

The provincial department of agriculture estimates the Alberta wheat crop of 1926 at 120 million bushels.

Even if work in The Pass is not as brisk as we would like to have it just now, everyone can at least be thankful at this Thanksgiving season of the year, for the glorious weather we are enjoying in this portion of the West, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, and the Eastern States are snow blanketed and cold wintry weather prevails.

Does Advertising Pay?

Last week The Journal carried an advertisement in which the price of meat was plainly set out—the first one of its kind appearing in this paper in over two years—and we are informed that several hundred people in Coleman and district patronized this progressive meat merchant. The question, "Does Advertising Pay?" would seem from the above to be answered in the affirmative, and yet we have seven or eight business firms in Coleman in the meat business who do not advertise.

The Journal, in season and out, has at all times advocated the policy—and practiced it rigidly—of buying at home. We believe it is sane, and sound to keep Coleman money circulating here. We believe the average man and woman in this locality realizes the advantages of doing this provided the local merchant plays fair, and does not hold them up on price or misrepresent quality. The safest guarantee the purchaser has that he is not asked to pay through the nose when making purchases is for the merchant to advertise his goods and prices.

This policy of putting their cards on the table—advertising goods and prices plainly—has been the custom of a number of local merchants engaged in selling hardware, groceries, clothing, boots and shoes, dry goods, and many other staples, with the one exception, that of meat.

It has been alleged there must be some sort of agreement, or at least tacit understanding, between those engaged in this line locally, that for reasons best known to themselves, they do not advertise prices. If such is the case, and color is lent to it by the fact that for over two years none of these merchants have quoted meat prices, those firms have no just reason for complaint if an outsider steps in seeking business in the local field, neither can they expect The Journal to become a party to any arrangement or understanding that appears inimical to the interests of our readers, and the public in general.

Boy Scout Commissioner Pays Visit to Coleman

Mr. W. Solway, Boy Scout Commissioner for Alberta, with headquarters at Edmonton, paid an official visit to Coleman last Thursday and Friday. On Friday evening he gave a short but very interesting talk on "Scouting" to the executive of the local association.

Mr. Solway said that the Scout movement was built on a tripod, the three legs of which were, the church, the home and the school. He stated that during the three years he had been engaged in Scouting work in Alberta it had been impressed upon him that there was urgent need of strengthening the three legs of the tripod. The rising generation were not receiving from the church, school or home, the training necessary to develop the right type of citizenship. He did not criticize the church heads for this unhappy state of affairs as he felt that the situation was brought about owing to parents not taking sufficient interest to see that their children attended church, and that religious training of some kind was given in the school or home.

He said that the world today was crying out for leadership in every line of endeavor, and leadership was also urgently needed to guide the wavering footsteps of the younger generation if we are to hand down to posterity those worth while things in life which form the bulwark of our civilization.

Come On Out/
Boy Scout Association.

A meeting of the above association was held in the Roman Catholic hall on Tuesday evening. Mr. E. F. Gare, vice-president, was in the chair and the other executive members present were: Rev. Father McCormick, Rev. A. D. Currie, Messrs. Howarth, Young, Key-Jones, and Brown.

Rev. A. D. Currie read the minutes of the previous meeting in the absence of Mr. J. Ashidge, secretary treasurer, which were passed. Mr. G. A. Brown intimated his willingness to accept the position of Scoutmaster of No. 1 Troop. His position as such was recommended on motion of S. Howarth and G. Key-Jones.

After some discussion it was moved by R. Young, seconded by S. Howarth, that No. 1 and 2 Troops meet in their respective halls on Tuesday evening of each week at 7:30 p.m., and that the Scoutmasters arrange for the instructors in first aid and signalling.

Any boys over 12 years in Coleman who do not belong to a boy's organization will be made welcome in the Scouts.

The Association have under consideration the formation of a carpet ball and hockey league for the coming winter.

The next meeting of the executive of the Association will be held on Tuesday evening, November 18th at 8 p.m. in the Roman Catholic hall. All those interested in Boy Scout work are invited to attend.

Pavement, Oil, or More Dust?

If we can't have some paved streets in Coleman in 1927, let's at least put some oil on our principal thoroughfares and keep some of the dust where it belongs.

In the small City of Kaslo, B.C., they call all settlements in British Columbia cities if they have, or ever had, a population of 1000 people—where the winter spent a few weeks this summer, the council purchased 40 barrels of oil and oiled the business and residential streets. Fernie this year oiled 54 blocks besides resurfacing 67 blocks during the past two years. Cranbrook has this year also constructed many blocks of permanent roadway. Practically every hamlet of any importance in the province to the west of Coleman is going after their road problem in a progressive, business-like manner.

With a strong wind from the west surely this "economy highway" bug ought to reach Coleman by 1927.

THE REMEDY

According to a news item in the daily press, the banks on the prairie are bursting with money because the farmers are so wealthy after harvesting their 1926 crop that they have no need to borrow. In order to relieve the situation and help out the banks, we would suggest they hire a special train and ship some of the money to the mining district in the Crow's Nest Pass, as there are lots of people up here who could use some good advantage just at this particular time.

W. I. Hold Regular Meeting

Give $200 to Swimming Pool—Discuss Merits of Parent-Teachers' Association

The regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Lindoe on October 26th. There were twelve members present.

The sum of two hundred dollars was voted to be immediately turned over to the swimming pool committee as the initial payment on the five hundred dollars they have pledged themselves to raise.

A committee consisting of Mrs. McLeod, Mrs. Price and Mrs. McLean, was appointed to meet the swimming pool committee to discuss the matter of raising further funds.

The W. I. have on hand the sum that was donated to them a number of years ago for the express purpose of helping to commemorate those soldiers who served in the Great War. It was decided to inform the town council of this, and offer it to them in case they have in mind a project for erecting a memorial.

The benefits of a Parent-Teachers' Association were discussed.

Mrs. Price gave a demonstration of candy making which was particularly interesting, showing the little know art of dipping chocolate candies.

Roll call was answered with recipes for delicious sandwiches and salads. Lunch was then served, the hostesses being Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Ash, Mrs. Cornett and Mrs. Burns.

Coleman Now Has Loyal Order of Moose

Coleman Lodge of L.O.O.M. was instituted on the 24th of October by A. J. Ingram. The following officers were appointed:

Dictator—John Clark.
Vice Dictator—William Lewis.
Past Dictator—Samuel Hatfield.
Prelate—Albert Knowles.
Secretary—Robert Hulbert.
Treasurer—Alfred Hatfield.
Sergeant at Arms—Fred Cole.
Inner Guard—Joe Komar.
Out Guard—Joe Kapolka.
Trustees—Thomas Johnston, J. D'Andrea and Charles Scarpella.

A. J. Ingram left Blairmore for Wayne on Tuesday and will return to Coleman and Blairmore about the last week in December to organize the Women of Mooseheart Legion.

Moose Attention!

There will be a regular meeting of the Loyal Order of Moose in the new Moose Hall, Coleman, on Sunday, November 7th, at 3 p.m.

Red Cross Tag Day.

The Red Cross Society of Frank are holding a Tag Day in that town on Saturday of this week, in order to procure funds to send to the provincial headquarters to help carry on this organization's noble work of mercy throughout the province.

Car Turns Over, Occupants Unhurt

A motor accident, that might have resulted in a sad fatality, occurred on Sunday morning last, when the Dodge car driven by Mr. Leslie Emmerson, in which were his two young sisters, Peggy and Patry, skidded in to the gravel on the Blairmore road and turned over on its side, completely demolishing the top, smashing the windshield, and otherwise causing several hundred dollars damages to the auto, but fortunately the three passengers escaped unharm.

Salvation Army Halloween Party Very Enjoyable Affair

The Salvation Army hall was the scene of an active and enjoyable evening of this week, when the Company Guards and friends entertained over sixty Sunday School children and mothers to a social evening in the form of a Halloween party.

The children were seated at a long table on which reposed a beautifully decorated Halloween cake and plenty of good things to eat, and the youngsters certainly enjoyed themselves at the table. After tea games of all sorts were played the children entering into them in a real Halloween spirit.

The party was brought to a close at 9 p.m. with the cutting of the cake. The children sang their favorite choruses, "When the Saints Come Marching In." Capt. Watt asked God's blessing upon the gathering. As the children were leaving the hall they were each served with candies and peanuts, and they all went home feeling this was the end of a perfect day.

Here and There

Edmonton—Large mouthed black bass may soon be available to Alberta sportsmen for a batch of fingerlings and yearlings from the Kootenay Lakes have been placed in Lac La Poudre by the Northern Alberta Fish and Game Protective Association.

McGill University opened her senior football season in Montreal at the Percival Molson Memorial Stadium on October 2nd, with a game against the Old Boys. One of the most enthusiastic fans of this game is E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who is an annual ticket holder, and who will be present at all the big games this season.

In a recent despatch from the west, W. L. Smith, former editor of the Farmer's Sun, estimates that approximately $1,000,000,000 will be added to Canada's income this year from the products of the farms of Western Canada. Last year's field crops were valued at $1,112,691,000 to the growers and it put the west in the prosperity column. Mr. Smith believes it is a fair assumption that this year the return will not be less.

An interesting estimate of Canada's per capita wealth has been made by the League of Nations, with comparative figures of 22 years ago. In 1925 the per capita wealth in this country amounted to $2,406, as contrasted with $1,100 per capita in 1903. Out of the 35 nations listed, Canada ranks third, the United States showing $2,518 and Great Britain $2,459 per capita, respectively.

With a view to obtaining financial assistance of some kind with which to aid the emigration of Austrian farmers to Canada, Dr. Heinrich Menckel, an Austrian Government official, arrived in this country recently on board the Canadian Pacific S.S. "Montroyal." There are 10,000 Austrian farmers who would emigrate to Canada, stated Dr. Menckel, all of them practical farmers, but they do not possess sufficient funds to pay their passage to this country.

Votes And Their Value

Analysis of the vote cast in the last Dominion general election discloses the same anomalies and contradictions revealed in elections generally for many years, and which, while causing much dissatisfaction and open criticism have, as yet, failed to result in steps being taken to remedy an admittedly weak condition in our present form of democratic government and in the election of representatives in Parliament. Various schemes have been suggested as a means of overcoming this weakness but none have proved wholly acceptable to a majority of the people.

The situation complained of is that all votes have not equal value; that, as a matter of actual fact, the vote of one man, or woman, is in many instances just as effective in electing a representative as the votes of two other men and women; that Canada today does not enjoy representation based on population; that the majority does not rule.

In support of these contentions it is pointed out that in the recent election the Conservatives polled 1,476,717 votes and elected 91 members to the House of Commons, while Liberals and Liberal-Progressives combined polled 1,454,923, or 21,814 votes less, but elected 132 members. In other words, Liberal and Liberal-Progressive votes had greater power than Conservative votes, why?

The reason is found in the fact that Conservative strength lies chiefly in the large manufacturing cities and centres of population like Toronto, Hamilton, London, Halifax, Vancouver, Montreal and Winnipeg. In these cities Conservatives are usually elected by huge majorities. On the other hand, in smaller urban and rural ridings the candidates of other parties have a fighting chance and are frequently elected but by much smaller majorities.

Furthermore, it has always been an accepted principle that the unit of population entitled to elect a member should be larger for cities than for rural districts. All political parties have agreed as to this, it being recognized that a City Member can keep more closely in touch with his constituents than can a member representing a rural riding, and that residents in a city constituency have means of making their views and desires known, and of enforcing their opinions, that is not possible in a rural constituency with a scattered population. There is so much force in this that no party has ever seriously challenged the fairness of requiring a larger population in city constituencies.

The existing plan of single member constituencies with larger population in city ridings works to the advantage of the Conservatives in the cities where Liberals and Labor are denied the representation to which their numbers entitle them, but, on the other hand, it works to the advantage of Liberals and other groups in the rural ridings.

To right the grievances in both sets of constituencies the advocates of Proportional Representation urge the abolition of the single member constituencies and the creation of larger constituencies electing four or five members each and the use of the single transferable ballot whereby every considerable group of public opinion would be able to obtain representation in exact proportion to its voting strength.

Objection is taken to this plan on the ground that it would result in too many groups in Parliament and the consequent inability of any one party or group to form a strong government. The force of this objection is, however, weakened by the fact that the present system has in no wise prevented such groups, and the deadlock which existed in the last two Parliaments was brought about not under Proportional Representation but under the existing system. Even in the newly elected Parliament there are no less than seven distinct groups as follows: Liberals, 119 members; Conservatives, 91; Progressives, 6; Liberal-Progressives, 13; United Farmers of Alberta, 11; Labor, 3, and Independents, 2.

Another objection, and a much stronger one, is that while Proportional Representation might be workable in centres of population, it is hardly applicable to settled rural Canada where constituencies to elect four or five members would have to be unduly large.

Non, Hugh Guthrie, the newly chosen temporary leader of the Conservative party, announces that while he does not favor Proportional Representation, something should be done to remove the inequalities in representation which now exist. He therefore advocates making the unit of population for all constituencies, urban and rural, the same. This would assist to remove the Conservative advantage in rural ridings, but would continue all the handicaps under which Liberals, Labor and others now suffer in the large city constituencies. Further, unless the members of the House of Commons was largely increased it would mean greatly reducing the representation of all rural and the smaller urban centres while adding enormously to the large cities and manufacturing centres, thus practically giving the Conservative party a permanent position of power.

During the last century and a half forward strides have been made in the extension of the franchise and in simplifying and improving methods of election, but with it all we have rigidly adhered to an obsolete constituency method of dividing the country and which is responsible for the well founded complaints now heard. There is room for reform in this vitally important matter in order that real democracy may prevail.

Invents Flying Apparatus

Australian Says Perfected Machine Will Cost $300

Wings will soon adorn the least angelic of men, says M. Lutch, an Australian inventor. He is credited with building an apparatus to be worn by the individual which will enable every one to do a certain amount of flying in comfort and safety.

The machine consists of a pair of wings moved by an improved motor which, although extremely light in weight, furnishes a surprising amount of power. The first model weighed eighty pounds and lifted the inventor several yards from the ground and enabled him to move swiftly in any direction at will.

M. Lutch says his invention, when perfected, can be turned out at about $300.

2 Years' Backache

Subdued by "Nervine"

"Backache was the bane of my life, and for two years I was so lame as to be unfit for work," writes E. S. Smith, from Georgetown. "While in Smith's Drug Store, I heard of Nervine being a wonderful pain-destructor, so I decided to try Nervine. Thanks to Nervine, my two years' backache was rubbed away, and today I am perfect in my work."

All those who suffer from weak, aching backs, those whose muscles are stiff, whose joints are swollen, let them try Nervine—the liniment that never fails. 25c at all dealers.

Ultra Violet Rays Beneficial

Children Thrive In Room Fitted With Special Glass

Interesting results were recorded in a one-month's experiment at a school in Staffordshire, England, in special window panes, permitting the passage of ultra violet rays, which are unable to penetrate ordinary window glass. Boys in the room fitted with special glass gained three pounds more in weight and a half inch more in height in comparison with those in rooms where the violet rays were excluded.

RHEUMATIC PAIN AND THIN BLOOD

Liniments Of No Avail — The Trouble Must Be Treated Through the Blood

The trouble never can hope for in rubbing something on the swollen, aching joints is a little relief. All the while the trouble is being caused more firmly rooted, it is now known that rheumatism is rooted in the blood, and the trouble is rooted in the blood because the root of the trouble is in the blood. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have proved so beneficial when taken for this trouble. They make new, rich blood which expels the poisonous acid and the rheumatic discharges. There are thousands of former rheumatic sufferers in Canada, now well and strong, who thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that they are now free from the aches and pains of this dreadful trouble. One of these is Mr. Robt. A. Smith, Mersey Point, N.S., who says:—"Some years ago I was attacked with rheumatism which grew so bad that I could not walk and had to go to bed under the doctor's care. It needed a remedy that I underwent a great deal of suffering. The doctor's medicine did not seem to reach the trouble, so I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I did so, and after taking them for some weeks I was able to get out of bed. I continued using the pills and was soon able to work, and I have not been troubled with rheumatism since. In other respects also I derived a great deal of benefit from the pills and I think them a wonderful remedy."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Old Country Travellers

Process Perfected That Makes All Blood Suitable For Transfusions

The time is not far away when blood suitable for use in transfusions will be obtained in bottles at a drug store. Dr. J. A. Yates, Milwaukee, Wis., predicted at the convention of the Interstate Post Graduate Medical Assembly in Cleveland.

Once when a minute's time balanced the life of a patient needing a blood transfusion a "donor" with right kind of blood cannot be found, Dr. Yates pointed out. Scientists in France, Bohemia, Dr. Yates said, have perfected a centrifugal washing process of blood serums which is so profound that it will render suitable even the blood of oxen and sheep, which, if transfused in natural state, would bring almost instant death.

It was deemed practicable that this process will make it possible to buy at a drug store blood bottled up without "characteristics" and ready to match for transfusion.

Have Not Solved Mystery

Doctors Unbais As Yet To Find

The assembly of medical men from many countries who gathered in America, have been exchanging knowledge, experiences, and ideas with regard to the study of cancer, is to leave us, apparently, without any complete understanding of the disease, and therefore without any definite cure for it. In an agreed statement—the first, probably, to which a hundred doctors have ever subscribed—the congress has assured us definitely that cancer is not hereditary, neither is it infectious nor contagious. So far as its treatment is concerned we are told only what we knew already—that radiology and surgery alone can deal with it, and that only if it is taken at an early stage—but the fact that our ignorance is being brought within narrower limits is in itself hopeful. It narrows the field of research, and thereby it brings us nearer to definite knowledge.

A Man Of Mystery

Has Spent Over Half Century in Wisconsin State Prison

Old Bill Maxwell has rounded out his fifty-fourth year at the state prison at Waupun, Wisconsin. He is 56 years old, and is spending his last days in the lumbering awaiting death. Maxwell is a man of mystery and has never spoken unless spoken to. More than half a century ago he killed a man over a woman and a sheriff saved him from being lynched by a crowd that had strung him to a tree. Since then he has refused to ask for a pardon and has expressed a wish that he might die in prison. He has not seen the outside world for more than half a century, has never seen a prison ball game or a movie and has never attended chapel.

Confidence In Alberta's Future

Recent Bond Sale Put Through On Very Favorable Terms

The Alberta Government has reason to be very much pleased with the bond sale that it has put through. Debentures to the extent of $5,000,000 have been disposed of. The money is obtained on an interest basis of 4.56 1/2 per cent. These terms are almost as favorable as those which Ontario and Quebec have been able to secure. When it is considered what a difference there usually is between the rate at which money can be obtained in an old and a newly settled country, it must be apparent what confidence exists in Alberta's future.

Milk And Sugar Combined For Cooking

As soon as you notice hot and spicy, averted drinks, a professional always use a boiled sugar syrup? It is to get that wonderful flavor and consistency that marks a perfect combination of the liquid and the sugar. Many a good cook has vastly improved her recipes by using Eagle Brand Condensed Milk for this very reason. The milk and sugar are thoroughly combined (almost pre-cooked, you might say) so that results are obtainable that could not be expected if you mixed the sugar and milk yourself. Having the milk and sugar already blended is a great advantage. Aside from saving time and making the trouble of mixing, there is the certainty of a finer flavor to the dish. The condensed milk combines quickly and easily with all other ingredients—blends them closer together—and gives the recipe a smoother texture. Another advantage of condensed milk is its convenience. One can keep several cans on hand as it keeps forever, so there is no such thing as running short, but rather a certainty of pure, fresh milk whenever it is required.

Making War Difficult

Spirit Behind League of Nations is Helping Says Canon Cody

Addressing the Canadian Club in Toronto Canon H. J. Cody, who recently returned from the League of Nations meeting at Geneva, said that he did not think Western Europeans will fight again. The great danger is between the white and black and yellow peoples. Everything turns on our attitude toward them in the days to come. But I believe the great spirit behind the League of Nations will be the blessing of God make it increasingly difficult for them to start a war, and find method of settling disputes by brute force."

Birds of Western Canada.

A volume of unusual public interest has recently been issued by the Victoria Memorial Museum. This is a copiously illustrated work on the "Birds of Western Canada," by P. A. Taverner, ornithologist. It contains 380 pages of text matter, 315 text figures and 84 colored plates, and is larger and fuller than "The Birds of Eastern Canada," published a few years ago. It contains full descriptive matter for distinguishing the different species of birds, notes on the nesting habits and distribution, and is crammed with interesting and vivid description setting for the life histories and habits of the feathered creatures. The numerous illustrations are of the kind that illustrate, and many of the colored plates are excellent reproductions of what in their class may be considered real works of art.

This splendid volume should be in every school room of Western Canada. It is one that no student of natural history or bird lover can afford to be without. It is sold in heavy paper covers at seventy-five cents, and can be had on application to the Director, Victoria Memorial Museum, Ottawa.

INCREDIBLE VALUE

Reports from all provinces indicate that the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, at the price of $1.00 a year, is sweeping the country. At the price of $1.00 a year, this big weekly journal is the marvel of the newspaper world. Notwithstanding the reduction in price (from $2.00 to $1.00) every big feature of this great paper has been faithfully maintained, and the publishers are ever watchful for opportunities to make improvements.

When one takes into consideration the huge volume, wide variety and high quality of the reading matter in every issue of the Family Herald, the question uppermost in the reader's mind is, "how can it be produced at the price?" It is a combination of a complete farm journal, family magazine and weekly newspaper—at a cost of less than TWO CENTS weekly.

Winter is rapidly approaching. For this coming winter's reading there is no better combination than your own local paper and the Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Wages in Russia.

With pretensions of bringing great cheer to the working man, the Russian Soviet Government announces a proposed increase in wages. The increase will amount to from 2 to 5 per cent of the present scale. Common labor in Russia can now make as much as $14 a month; skilled labor from $30 to $40 a month. The pay increase for common labor, therefore, will amount to anywhere from 28 to 70 cents a month; for skilled labor to from 60 cents to $2 a month. The social and economic attractions of Communism as found in Soviet Russia offer no very persuasive argument to the American working man.—Chicago Tribune.

The beans are out of the bag! An eminent eastern lawyer says the "trouble with the maritimes" is that the "maritimers" have just lain down in the "harness."

While Quebec and Ontario have been battling for industrial development; Manitoba fighting tooth and nail for the Hudson Bay Railway and a corridor to tide-water; Saskatchewan struggling to raise the greatest wheat crops in the world; Alberta striving to land her coal in Ontario and her grain and cattle in Britain; British Columbia hitting out right and left for low freight rates and traffic routed Pacificward—the Maritimes have given up the fight, rolled over and gone to sleep.

Life is a constant battle, despite the efforts of the Calgary (and other) school boards to inculcate peaceful tendencies in the young. If we get off our toes, we soon drop out of the race.

Maybe Mr. Calder's speech will put "the kick" back into the Maritimers. Let us see how they react to a little bitter criticism!—Banana Mail.

Beating the train to the crossing is always a risk in favor of the train but when a motorist halts his car and waits until an engine is almost alongside him before he tries to get over, then the risk becomes an absolute certainty—against the motorist. This was the case recently in Toronto where a car was signalled to stop by the watchman at a crossing, obeyed the signal, and then decided he would still try and get over. Fortunately there were no injuries and the only sufferer was the automobile.

Discovers New Hybrid Plant Combining The Advantages Of Both Sweet Clover And Alfalfa

Scientific agriculturalists throughout Canada and the United States, first startled and then intensely interested, are now following with close attention research work proceeding at the University of Saskatchewan into the production of a forage plant which apparently combines the advantages of both sweet clover and alfalfa, and eliminates the disadvantages of each.

The research work began when Prof. L. E. Kirk, in charge of forage crop work in the university's field husbandry department, discovered in a plot of Acre's sweet clover a number of strange plants, bearing evidence of being the result of a cross between Arctic and alfalfa. This was in 1924, and since that time the work has been proceeding along quietly.

It will be a long time yet before any definite announcement can be made regarding the value of the new plant, but agricultural authorities at the university find some cause for optimism in the result of their research to date.

The far-reaching importance of the discovery is explained by Dean W. J. Litherford, head of the Saskatchewan College of Agriculture, who, as it is well known, has been the agricultural college of the university.

From year to year, as the prairie soil is used again and again for wheat production, the nitrogen content of the soil, without which wheat production is a practical impossibility, is becoming more and more depleted. As Dean Litherford expresses it, part of the nitrogen of the prairie soil is annually shipped east with the wheat.

Unless the nitrogen can be replaced, the great plains area, the main grain producing area of Canada and the United States, will eventually reach the stage where wheat can no longer be grown.

Leguminous plants have been called for by the scientific agriculturalists to replace the lost nitrogen. Legumes store up nitrogen about their roots and this nitrogen remains in the soil for succeeding plants of any species, including wheat, to use. Sweet clover and alfalfa, the supposed parents of the new plant which is the centre of interest in the foliage crop branch of the university, are both legumes. Both can give back to the soil the previous nitrogen taken from them by wheat crops.

The vital importance of legumes in the production of wheat crops is thus apparent.

Both Arctic sweet clover and alfalfa, however, have objectionable characteristics. Conditions of Saskatchewan agriculture make Arctic sweet clover preferable to alfalfa as a rotation legume, although wherever and whenever the latter plant can be successfully used in a crop rotation, it is the better of the two. Both, says Dean Litherford, both alfalfa and Arctic, in addition to replacing nitrogen, supply excellent feed and pasture. Alfalfa seed is quite expensive.

An entirely new phase of agricultural possibilities is opened up through the discovery of the plant and the progress made to the present in research. Whether the end of the avenue finds agriculture as it has been benefited from a practical as well as a scientific point of view, or whether the research work results in disappointment cannot yet be conjectured. The discovery of the new plant has occasioned considerable surprise in the agricultural world, not only from a realization of its possible practical values, but from the very fact of the apparent cross between Arctic clover and alfalfa—two greatly different species of plants.

Just about the time Prof. Kirk made his discovery, similar discoveries were made independently in Manitoba and North Dakota. Research work is also under way in those places.

Stock Raisers Will Organize With View Of Obtaining Better Prices

In an effort to obtain better prices and improved marketing conditions, British Columbia stock raisers have decided to follow the lead of Alberta and other prairie provinces and organize a selling agency for their cattle and live stock, with the head office to be in Vancouver. This step was decided upon recently at the most representative gathering of stock raisers ever held in the province, at Kamloops.

Feeding And Fattening Sheep

Information Gleaned From Feeding Trials Conducted At Regina

In a feeding trial carried on in Alberta, and which is recorded in Bulletin 68 of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, dealing with sheep raised in Central Alberta, between oat green feed and lowland hay for fattening ewes, the results proved very much in favor of lowland hay.

Another test was conducted to ascertain the best roughage for feeding shearing wethers in winter. Eight different kinds of roughage were employed, namely, alfalfa, upland hay, rough hay, cut oat green feed, cut straw timothy hay, meadow lowland hay, and one lot fed on cut oat green feed. Whole oats were fed to the first eight of nine lots of wethers, there being ten head in each lot.

As an aid to the author, the Superintendent P. H. Ross and L. T. Chapman, assistant of the Lacombe, Alta., Dominion experimental station, two conclusions are evident from elaborate data given in the bulletin. First, the rougher roughages made good gains and made the most money; secondly, that a grain supplement is necessary for fattening wethers. The second point is brought out very forcibly in two of the lots, one of which fed cut oat green feed with oats gave a profit of $104 per head, while the other, fed no grain, furnished a loss of $128 per head. Another lot which received cut oat straw with oats showed even a greater profit than the first-mentioned.

Trees Spreading In West

Within a Few Generations There Will Be No Treeless Prairies

Mapping the spread of trees in the Prairie Provinces, with the object of ascertaining at rate at which spread goes on, is one of the latest activities in which Prof. V. W. Jackson, of the Manitoba Agricultural College, and other authorities on arboriculture are now engaged.

The mapping is being done in connection with systematic campaigns to have more of the prairie covered with trees than is at present the case, and yet in no way interfere with agricultural development.

So far, the spread of the poplar has been the most remarkable to be noted. Prof. Jackson points out. All through Saskatchewan "poplar islands" are forming and increasing in size, and it appears that the poplar spread all the more rapidly as new land is broken for agricultural purposes. It is only a matter of a few generations until there will be no such thing as a treeless stretch of prairie of any great extent, Prof. Jackson states.

While the poplar is easily first in the way it adapts itself to the conditions of the prairies, satisfactory results are being obtained with oak and elm. Arctic Birch has been sent to Red Deer, Alta., have germinated and the saplings give promise of developing into lovely trees. Elm seeds have also been planted in Alberta and likewise golden larch. The progress of these saplings is being closely watched.

Boosted Price Of Tea

Thirty Francs Is Price In Paris Restaurant Because Spoons Were Stolen

Thirty francs for a cup of tea charged in one of the best restaurants in the Bois de Boulogne has caused many protests from customers. The tea is very weak and no spoon is served with it.

"I don't mind paying a dollar for a cup of sweetened hot water," an American remarked to the waiter, "but at least give me a spoon to stir up the sugar with."

"The absence of spoons is the reason why the tea costs thirty francs," is the reply. "We had a thousand spoons at the beginning of the season; we have about fifty left. Spoon hunters took the rest. We only serve spoons now to customers who know."

Alberta's Gold Crop

That the probable average yield of wheat throughout Alberta will be 19 bushels to the acre on 1,275,000 acres, giving a total of 19,225,000 bushels is the forecast of the eleventh crop report issued by the provincial Department of Agriculture. This will be the second largest crop yet in the province's history.

British Students Work on Harvest

We had a wonderful time and were treated well everywhere. There is not a single complaint and all the boys are tremendously enthusiastic over the country. We enjoyed the work in the harvest fields and most of us have a little money to take back with us, despite lost time by unfavorable weather.

That is the verdict of the thirty students of Oxford University and Wye Agricultural College who returned recently to England on Canadian Pacific liner Montecarlo. Hanging in age from 18 to 25 went out to Saskatchewan under the auspices of the Canadian Pacific department of Colonization and Development.

John Thompson, leader of the party, said they were so pleased with Canada that two of them had decided to remain here and had started in the West while "I think it safe to say that with in two years at least twelve of them will be back in Canada."

Without exception the students were reluctant to leave Saskatchewan and farmers for whom they worked were in every case satisfied.

St. Catharines, Ont.—"During my first experience period I was in very poor health, was very nervous, suffered from morning sickness, had backache and abdominal pains. I was as miserable as could be. Then a friend I knew of Dr. F. W. Stone's Favorite Prescription, and after I began taking it I got along fine; it relieved me of the morning sickness, pain and distress thru my back and sides and I grew well and strong. Was able to do my own work, the remainder of the time, experienced very little suffering and had a fine healthy baby, who has given a day's sickness except slight colic. I was very glad to know of a medicine so valuable as the 'Prescription' proved to be."—Mrs. Reginald Stone, 68 Haynes Ave., All Saints.

Canada's Great Mission

To Draw United States Into Working Fellowship With Empire

The ten millions of Canadians, if they will can wield under the old flag more influence than any equal number of people elsewhere. Above all, Canada amongst the self-governing nations of the Empire has a position and a mission like no other. For three thousand miles her open frontier marches peacefully with that of the American Republic. If she can rise to the highest view of her destiny she will not deliberately, steadily, to harmonize her intimate neighborhood to the United States with her membership of the British Empire, and to draw the two systems into a working fellowship which would lead the world—London Overseer.

The rapidity with which worn out paper money came back worried the United States treasury. It used to cost about $4,000,000 a year for replacement alone.

So the Bureau of Standards was put to work on the problem. It was discovered that the relative weakness of the bills was due to the all-fibre fibre composition of the paper. Mixed with about 25 per cent of cotton fibre, the bills will last much longer, according to the experts who conducted the tests.

The new $1 bill will not only be handsome, but more useful.

Tales Of Heroism

Radio Operator and Engineers and Firemen Stay With Sinking Ship and Perish

Tales of heroism on the part of the engine and firemen and the radio operator are related by the twelve survivors of the crew of 35 of the British freighter Eastway, which went down off Bermuda in the recent hurricane.

The radio operator, E. James, was at his post, repeating his wireless call of distress and went down with his ship. Likewise, the engineers and firemen refused to make an attempt to enter the single remaining lifeboat, and went to the bottom with the craft.

The twelve survivors who were picked up by the British schooner Luciline, have been brought to St. Georges by that vessel.

The rescued men say they had been for seventeen hours without water and but little food when the Luciline ran alongside and picked them up. They report that while they were at the mercy of the waves they were passed at close range by a larger steamer which ignored their rockets and other signals of distress.

Englishman Has Peculiar Job

Is Last Exponent of Ancient Art of Ox-Roasting

Fred Tyler, Stratford-on-Avon, the oldest surviving exponent of the ancient English art of ox-roasting, was appointed official ox-roaster at the Manchester Civic Week Program.

This will be the 124th occasion in 40 years in which Mr. Tyler has been called upon to perform at public celebrations during which time he has roasted 92 oxen and 50 pigs.

"I am at getting 5,000 sandwiches made from each ox," he said. "From the moment the fire is lit until the last slice of roast should not be more than ten hours. To make the job look really nice I always leave the horns on during roasting and curl the tail of the ox. When it revolves on the spit in this condition many people think that the animal is being roasted alive, and they rush off to the police to make complaints of cruelty."

The largest ox roasted by Mr. Tyler was a 14 cwt. animal at the coronation celebrations at Newport, Monmouthshire.

A Permanent Agriculture

By C. W. Peterson

Canada faces a great social problem, namely, to make country life much more attractive than it has been in the past. Great progress has been made in that direction during the past decade. The motor car, good roads, the rural telephone and mail delivery, radio—all have made conspicuous contributions. The farmers through their co-operative institutions and by their own unaided efforts, have taken mighty strides towards increased, rural prosperity and contentment. The urban people of Canada should, however, assiduously cultivate "agricultural-mindedness" and be actively sympathetic towards the efforts of the countryside to live the fuller life. That way only lies the path leading to a permanent agriculture. At present rural life is two generations behind the urban community in living conditions and the spectacular drift to the cities demonstrates a demonstration against present inferior conditions of farm life compared with urban existence.

The sarcastic ranting about the "auto-ridden" farmer and "back-to-the-buggy" should cease. We should, on the contrary, rejoice over every new farm auto and be thankful for every additional farm home glutted away from the agricultural slump status through the adoption of modern sanitation. Unfriendly criticism of this nature has its moral effect upon the countryside and does its part in encouraging the drift from country to town, inevitably followed by seasonal unemployment with its concomitants—a lower wage scale and the further exploitation of our splendid, young manhood, after bearing the not inconsiderable burdens of the unproductive time period and the cost of education.

Aside from this, the present detachment, and often impatient, attitude of town towards countryside cannot fail to further intensify the economic and political drift away from rural province and towards centralization upon the more spectacular, urban issues, incidental to the complex civilization of modern times. In a preponderantly agricultural country such as ours, this world-wide tendency should be curbed at any cost and a more sympathetic understanding developed, in deed as well as word, between urban and rural interests. Canada has much to learn in that direction. With a new slant on this important problem and a genuine desire to lift agriculture up to its proper position, Canada can with confidence invite new settlers to cast their fortunes in with this country and with every hope of success.

Contractor - Found Way To Health

After Suffering Tortures From Indigestion and Run-down Condition, He Quickly Regains Health And Strength. Takes Tanlac.

Edison Bradshaw, a successful Toronto contractor, 415 Wellesley Street, says: "I hope my story will be the means of helping others who suffered as I did. I feel like a new man, thanks to Tanlac."

"Before taking Tanlac, I doctored for nervous prostration but seemed to be getting worse. I had no appetite and when I forced myself to eat the pain from indigestion was torturing. My heart bothered me after the slightest exertion. I was nervous, irritable and could scarcely sleep. At times I would doze off, then suddenly my muscles would twitch and I would awake with a start. I was almost in despair."

"Nothing seemed to help me, until I started to take Tanlac. The first two bottles made me feel so much better that I kept on taking it. Now my appetite is good, stomach normal, nerves in good shape. I can sleep well at night, in fact have entirely recovered."

"I heartily recommend Tanlac because I feel sure it will do for others what it has done for me in restoring my health."

Tanlac has helped thousands of men and women. It is nature's own remedy made from roots and herbs according to the famous Tanlac formula. The first bottle, as a rule, brings wonderful relief. Keep up the treatment and see how quickly you will grow stronger and healthier.

She saw the stabbardness that she always hated, seated deeper in his eyes. "No," he returned. "It can't be worked out that way. Jo, I'll never live with you in a house you'd paid for, even with money given you for a reason that I hope will turn out to be all right. You see, I too, have plans. You know them, even you who've cared much about disfigurement. I've got to make my way. The career I want is one that can't be bought. You can't give it to me like you would a birthday present. Different, you see, from yours."

She looked at him from widened eyes. She wondered at her own calm. She was not hurt, as she had been that night at Mrs. Adams' when John repulsed her. He was not doing that sort of thing again. Now he was quiet, stubbornly taking himself out of her life, or rather thrusting her out of his.

A wild impulse to run up stairs, wrap herself in a cloak and run out into the street with him, thrilled her for a moment and then lapsed into the dead calm that puzzled her.

"But, John," she said, "I love you. I have always loved you. Why must you make such a fuss about the money? It won't change me, not so much as it has changed you?" He interrupted her:

"That's just it! I won't change you. It has only brought you out of yourself, and revealed you. This sort of thing won't get you any place in the end. It is not the background for a girl, no matter how good she is—and I believe, Jo, as I always have that you're good. You have your good just as long as you can. I shall always want you, but I just can't have you. Can I?"

His last words were a pleading for his justification. It would have been better, perhaps, if he had not spoken them. They reminded Joanna that he was one who would not, could not, understand her, or one like her. Still, she wasn't hurt. She suffered, because her heart was turning over. She longed for him, wanted to yield to him as he would have had her yield to his tears for her and to his ideas that she should be some other kind of girl, but she realized that it would all be useless. She would never be content with all enchantments taken out of the world that had suddenly become so lavish with her.

"But John," she said, "I love you. I have always loved you."

"Then you mustn't be coming back, you won't accept things as they are and come back to me?" she asked.

"If you still want me, when I have made my own way, and have money of my own, I will be wanting you," he said, slowly. She probed his words and understood what he really meant. "You mean," she said, "that you will want me enough, even, to take me no matter what I shall have become, by then? Isn't that it? He wouldn't answer her. She continued:

"Was it because you think that I should be drab, and a kill joy, and go into a shell and hide except when some prurient chaperone is satisfied that I have enough clothes outside of me and enough false hair inside of me to make it safe for her to take me out for a walk in a church yard, that you spent more than an hour shut away in here with Yvonne? She doesn't walk about with her eyes on the ground and her mind on the parties of the ill. Didn't you suffer—ah!—alone with her?"

"We were talking of you," he replied, shortly.

"Yes," she retorted, her eyes narrowed a bit, "there's a man who coaxed me into the winter garden just a little while ago, and spent the whole time talking of his wife. She knew that she was being utterly foolish and childish, and irrelevant. But, still, she watched John curiously. For some reason he thought it necessary to explain."

"When I told her I was going and wanted to say goodnight, as I should, she brought me in here. Before I realized it I got to telling her how much I do love you, and why I can't have you. That was all. She told me of course, that I was a fool. She is one who would think so."

"And so am I John," Joanna told him, quickly.

Kentworth opened the door. When he saw that John was there, still there, he would have gone away and closed the door behind him. Joanna called him back.

"Mr. Wilmore is just leaving," she explained, giving John, coolly, "and I don't want to go out and dance just yet. I want you to stay in here and talk to me."

It would have been an awkward moment if Roddy had been once over to be at a loss to meet any situation. His wisdom seldom failed. He chafed her and said good night to the younger man with an ease that cleared the atmosphere. When John went away, Joanna did not get up from the couch. She held out her hand to him and when he took it she wrapped her fingers about his and, held them for a moment. There were no words between them.

Roddy went over and gently closed the door, which John had left opened. When he stood over the girl her head had dropped onto her arm. She drew her knees under her. As Roddy took note of her he concluded that just then she was not thinking of herself, or of anything about herself, instinctively he sensed the slow evening of a scale beam, weighted at either end with two precious bits of magic. And he knew that that one end of the scale was slowly dropping. He wondered which end would be the heavier.

Without a warning rattle the limp figure on the couch straightened and rose. Roddy knew how the scale had turned. He was startled by the change in Joanna. Her pose was now, and almost regal. There was something haughty and something else defiant and dangerous in her.

"I wonder," she asked him, stirring him with a look from between her lids that he had not caught before, "if you would think me very silly if I should ask you to do a very silly thing."

His answer was the obvious one. And it was obvious, also, that he should go a little closer to her. The message in her eyes made it so.

"I want you to kiss me," she said. He drew her up to him instantly. His lips had almost brushed hers when she suddenly pressed him back—again that trick with her hands. "I want to tell you something, first," she exclaimed. "It isn't you, Roddy, that I want to kiss me—anyone would do just now. There's something on my lips, something that was put there a little while ago, I want taken off—it needs a kiss to do it. Because you happen to be here I am asking you. You see I must be fair to you—since I am doing the asking."

"One explains a kiss afterwards, never before," he murmured and caught her hands and held them. She yielded her lips completely. She felt that she was being wrapped in a burst of flame. She closed her eyes so that she would not see what was in his, but she gave herself to the earnest without stint. When he released her she said:

"There! You mustn't spoil it by demanding another. I want to go out to the party, now, and dance. And I am going to flirt outrageously with Teddy Dorminster. He has been begging me to discover how sentimental he can be all evening. But I still want you to do something else for me. I want you to make sure that Yvonne knows you kissed me, and that I allowed it. You don't need to say I asked you but you may say that I didn't take my lips away."

With half an hour Joanna was hidden away, in the safest corner of the winter garden, with young Teddy. She had promised him only fifteen minutes. She granted him but a few more, despite his pleadings that one couldn't crowd an eternity into such a

HAIR CAME OUT IN COMBURLS
Pimples on Scalp Itched Badly. Cuticura Heals.

"After having the flu my hair fell out so that I had to have it bobbed. I also had some pimples on my scalp and it itched badly. My hair was lousy and dry, and when I combed it, it came out in clumps."

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. It helped me so I purchased more, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap, together with the ointment, my hair was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Geo. H. Elliott, West St., R. R. 2, St. Louis, Ont.

Head and Chest Colds Relieved In A New Way

A Vapour which Relieves Medicated Vapours when Applied Over Throat and Chest.

Inhaled as a vapour and, at the same time absorbed through the skin like a liniment, Vicks VapoRub reaches immediately inflamed, congested air passages. This is the modern direct treatment for all cold troubles that is proving so popular in Canada and the States where over 17 million jars are now used yearly.

Just rub Vicks over throat, chest and inhale the medicated vapors. It quickly loosens up a cold.

short space of time. She insisted that he find Brandon and bring him to her. "He has not been seen to me tonight," she explained. "And I want to be able to see him."

She laughed at that rhetorical mix-up and sent him away. Roddy Kentworth, when he had turned her over to Dorminster, went back into the morning room. When he had made himself a drink, out of the bottles in the cabinet, he settled back in a chair and felt to studying the ceiling. When Yvonne looked in he explained that his brain had become twisted around a conundrum and that he couldn't take an interest in anything or anybody outside until he'd straightened it out.

A New Hobby For Women

Remarkable Interest Is Now Being Taken In Basketry

Most people will have noted the remarkable growth of interest in basketry of late years. At last women have a hobby offered them far more interesting to the average person than sewing, which does not affect the eyes, and that many people are finding that they can combine pleasure with usefulness in filling in their spare time at a pleasant hobby and at the same time furnish all the small articles of furniture which are so necessary to the comfortable home.

Phone Service Across Atlantic

Will Soon Inaugurate Regular Service Between London and New York

The London Daily Express says that commercial radio telephone service between New York and London will be inaugurated before the end of the year. Experiments which have been in progress for two years by the Radio Corporation of America and the radio branch of the British Post Office, it adds, have resulted in overcoming the difficulties which hitherto prevented regular communication, and experts are now engaged in trying to find the best wave length and the most favorable transmission hours.

The Express states that the time now required to make the necessary preliminary connections for a transatlantic radio telephone conversation is no longer than a telephone connection between London and Manchester, and that the sounds will soon be just as distinct.

Says Modern Faces Lapsed

Symmetry Destroyed By Greater Use Of Right Eye

Modern faces are too lopsided to meet the beauty requirements of the old masters, says H. L. Taylor, chairman of the British National Council for the Preservation of Eyesight.

Men, and especially intellectual men, are much more likely, in his opinion, to have the right side of the face more developed than the left side. This is due to using the right eye extensively, with the result that it eventually moves away from the nose further than the left eye.

Modern women also suffer from this defect, Mr. Taylor declares. He says it is rarely that one finds women with the symmetrical oval faces painted by Michael Angelo and Raphael. Even Italy these types are not so numerous among peasant women.

Conquers Asthma. To be relieved from the terrible suffocating cough to asthma is a great thing, but to be safeguarded for the future is even greater. Not only does Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy bring prompt relief, but it introduces a new era of life for the afflicted. Systematic inhaling of smoke or fumes from the remedy prevents reattacks and often effects a permanent cure.

Mother of Eleven Children Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Her Interesting Experience

Buckingham, Quebec.—"I am the mother of eleven living children, five months old."

"I am only 28 years of age, and I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness and my nerves. I know of it from my sister, Dame Edouard Bellefleur, of Ramsayville."

"For five years I was in misery and was always ready to have good health. My daughter, who is 15 years old, has also taken it and will be happy to recommend it to all young girls."

"—Dame Wilhelmina Parnier, Box 41, Buckingham, Quebec."

Why suffer for years with backache, nervousness and other ailments common to women from early life to middle age when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will give you relief?

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 250,000 replies were received, and 40 out of every 100 reported they were benefited by it.

Here and There

Victoria—Twenty head of grade Oxford ewes, two years old, from Mayne Island, have been sold to Japanese buyers. This makes a new departure in the sheep industry of the Island, being the first of the home production to be sent to Japan.

It is estimated that southern British Columbia will produce 3,217,000 boxes of apples this season, this is about 700,000 boxes more than last year's production. Arrangements are being made for a heavy export business to Great Britain, as well as to the Prairies and Eastern Canada.

A regular aerial mail service has been established between Osaka in Japan and Darwin in South Australia, two Japanese built "Kawanishi" planes being used. This service is daily, and is being sponsored by the "Osaka Mainichi" one of the largest newspapers in Japan whose aviators recently flew to Berlin.

Moose Jaw—One thousand head of Western Canadian light horses purchased for the Soviet government were assembled here. The horses, which are all light, are being bought for the Russian government with Russian funds placed in Canadian banks for that purpose. A similar purchase was made last year and the repeating of the order indicates satisfaction with the Canadian stock.

The increase in the net profits of the Canadian Pacific Railway for the first eight months of the year ending August 31st is $6,814,895.76, according to a financial statement issued at the headquarters of the Canadian Pacific at Montreal. This is the increase in profits as compared with the profits for the same period in 1926. The increase in the gross earnings over the same period in 1925 is stated at $12,691,364.57.

"Hell-Boaring Canyon," the scene of a dramatic incident in John Murray Gibbon's new novel "Eyes of a Gypsy" is the actual name of a remote valley in the Canadian Pacific Rockies as known to the guides and hunters, although the Geographic Board of the Canadian Government has just changed it to a less romantic name—"Numa Creek." The reason for the change in name is that there is another Hell-Boaring Canyon in the Rockies which claims a prior right to the name.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, one of the oldest military organizations in the United States, being founded as an offshoot of the famous Artillery Company of London in 1539, held their 229th annual field day and march past at Montreal, arriving at the Canadian Pacific Place Victory Station on October 2nd. About 250 members of this organization, representing the oldest families in the State of Massachusetts, took part in this event.

Members of the Empire Parliamentary Association, numbering twenty-one delegates from the Parliaments of the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State arrived in Canada recently on board Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Scotland. They travelled across the Dominion from Quebec to Vancouver, stopping en route at Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. They sailed by S.S. Aorangi from Vancouver, August 25 for Sydney, Australia, where they will attend the Association Conference to be held in September and October.

G. Walter Booth, Prosecuting Attorney for the State of Ohio, in an interview in the tourist department of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Montreal recently, stated that American hunters were choosing Canadian hunting grounds in place of those in the United States practically without exception. Americans, he said, were taking one hundred per cent. interest in Canadian game resorts. Mr. Booth is at present in Canada on his annual duck hunt near Winnipeg, and also a big game trip in north-western Quebec.

"Consistency, Thou Art a Jewel"

One of the retail merchants attending a short course lecture in Manitoba recently was found to be wearing a cap with a brand name that showed it had been purchased from a mail order house. A dry goods man in a certain town in Manitoba goes out hunting with a hardware merchant but buys his shells from a mail order house. There is a druggist who gets his wife's spring coat out of town, and a grocer's wife who sends to the mail order house for floor coverings which can be supplied by the local dealer at the same price or a trifle more.

If retailers want to overcome mail order competition they must observe the golden rule as applied to business. This necessitates the development of a community spirit among the merchants of each town. A local merchant should be pleased to see even a customer of his own buy her dress or suit or shoes from a local competitor rather than send away for them. If he has lost business, it is his duty to find out the reason and endeavor to prevent a similar occurrence. But he should not feel ill disposed to the man across the street who has done something to keep the home trade at home.

Personal and Local

Mrs. C. Graham's home was the scene of a very pleasant Halloween bridge party last Saturday afternoon. Honors at cards were carried off by Mrs. J. McConaghy, Mrs. H. K. Lillie and Mrs. Luke Lindoe.

The Coleman teaching staff is depleted this week, many teachers left Wednesday evening to attend the convention which takes place in Lethbridge today and Friday.

The Democratic party made big gains in the elections held on Tuesday in the United States. The results would indicate that high tariff is slipping in the home of its greatest exponent.

Aimee Sample McPherson was bound over to appear at a higher court on charges of criminal conspiracy at Los Angeles on Wednesday.

England is exporting to the Empire 8 per cent more than she was before the war, and the Empire is sending to England 25 per cent more.
